

User Groups

VIVO User Groups are community-led groups organized based on countries, regions or languages. These groups help the participants share information about their activities, projects, events and ideas. The global VIVO Community has hundreds of users from institutions all around the world, a vibrant, open and engaged community.

LYRISIS aims to support the creation and coordination of User Groups in order to facilitate communication across these groups and the promotion of their activities. These groups are also important for the VIVO governance to better understand the needs and requirements of the community and take those into consideration for leading and steering the program.

This page and its sub-pages are the platform to coordinate collaboration among such institutions in order to facilitate discussions on relevant themes.
