MESSAGE FROM THE CEO

This month I am pleased to welcome new DuraSpace Board members Kaithlin Thaney and Wolfram Horstmann.

Ms. Thaney is an open advocate and Senior Fellow at Mozilla. Most recently she served as the Director of Mozilla Leadership Networks at the Mozilla Foundation, overseeing community-based programs in science, learning, advocacy, Internet of Things, and women and web literacy. She also founded and directed Mozilla's first science program—the Mozilla Science Lab—empowering thousands of researchers, developers, and librarians to collaborate through fellowships, open source, and project-based learning.

Dr. Horstmann is the University Librarian at Georg-August-Universität Göttingen, Bielefeld University. Previously he was the Associate Director for Digital Library Programmes and IT at The Bodleian Library, University of Oxford. His research interests include issues related to management of and access to research data in university libraries.

We were gratified to receive more than 120 applications for the DuraSpace Business Development Manager position. Interviews are underway for the person who will cultivate and deepen relationships and partnerships to elevate our organization's profile, and to expand the services it offers. I look forward to introducing the new Business Development Manager soon.

The 2017 Membership Campaign kicks off in April. As current members you will be emailed information prior to your renewal date. We value and appreciate your continued financial support, which is critical to advance the DSpace, Fedora, and VIVO open source software projects. While DuraSpace proudly provides these applications for free for anyone to use, our projects rely on your membership dollars to pay for the staff who provide technical leadership, direct strategic planning, organize community outreach, and coordinate timely software releases.

Warm regards,

Debra Hanken Kurtz
